PHYSICS LAB REPORT -CALCULATING THE REFRACTIVE INDEX OF A GLASS

The column labeled 'Incident angle' contains 5 different angles of incidence measured in degrees (\*). They are the angles between the light rays from the ray box that struck the glass block and the normal which is an imaginary line parallel to the surface of the glass block. These angles were measured using a protractor which had the least reading equaled to  $1^{\circ}$ . However, since the rays had a considerable thickness, the uncertainties of the incident angles were taken to be  $1^{\circ}$ .

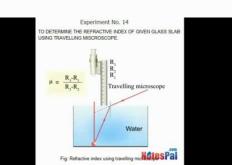

The column labeled 'Refracted angle' contains the angles of refraction (r), measured in degrees (*), of the light rays after being refracted by a glass block. The refracted rays were obtained by Joining the point where the incident rays entered the glass block and the point where the mergent rays left the block. The angles between the refracted rays and the normal were then measured using a protractor which had the least reading equaled to 1° to obtain the refracted angles, which were recorded to 2 significant figures. Five trials of the experiment were performed to reduce the effect of random errors. Due to the considerable thickness of the light rays, the uncertainties of the refracted angles were taken to be 1*.

A liquid of refractive index 1.33 is placed between two identical plano-convex lenses, with refractive index 1.50. Two possible arrangement P and Q are shown. The system is
